

took both hands to hold, "Look it over," he said. "It isn't strange."

"I'd never seen so much money at one time before, but I knew it had been O. K. in the mint."

"I may be crazy," continued Parker, "and Beell would just as soon take a crazy man's money as any others" (which was true). "I'll bet him a thousand dollars I can throw him. I'll deposit a thousand in bills with you now to bind a match."

"I tore off the wrapper and handed it to me. The stuffing looked as happy as the wrapper."

Parker Knew What He Wanted.

"I've got the money," he said. "I could deny that. And it's my money."

Parker finally met Beell and made good.

After Parker had toted Beell around and talked over and over about what his man could do to any of them and opened his shirt to show the roll, those who had wrestlers to wrestle began to look up and take notice.

"What kind of a rope have you on that bundle of newspapers?" asked Harry Pollock.

"You can cut the rope and take the paper to the bank and get it changed if you'll throw your man Jenkins on the mat with Beell," retorted Parker.

It didn't take long more than a few steps to find his thousand. He snaps it in his hands to gather in such snaps as this.

Jenkins won and he and Pollock copped Parker's thou. And everybody wondered why Parker wore such a happy smile at his loss. But Parker knew. Parker knows a heap. And what he knows is good for him. Beell astonished the wrestling world by his work. His name was known all over the next day and a new wrestler, classed as in the Sporting News, had entered for the gate receipts.

"Cheapest thousand dollars' worth of advertising I ever got," said Parker.

Every One of 135 Pounds Was Good.

And he came within an ace of getting the ad. for nothing and doubling his stake at that. Parker took Beell through the West and has been coming money with him ever since. There may be wiser heads than Parker, but they are not in the wrestling ring.

Jenkins weighs 220 pounds. Beell 155. When Tom saw the little fellow before he he sighed, whether in compassion or because he thought he had one of those defensive fellows who never try, no one knows. But if Tom and the crowd-it was a "private" affair, but there were invitations galore-were prepared to find a Bohmer on the mat, they were quickly relieved.

Beell went at Jenkins from the world. He took the defensive at once. He was there to throw his man, not to stay. And he did. Weight told in the finish, however, and Jenkins got the next two falls.

But he took everything that was in him. Beell was trained too. The little fellow never showed a sign of the terrible speed of his work took the stamina out of him, as he had no reserve to call upon. Jenkins was not in a condition, and, paradoxically, as it may seem, this fact was in his favor. The faster he went the better he became. He was training down all the time. His body was as wet that Beell couldn't hold him, while the little fellow was as dry as a sandworm.

Beell will know more about Jenkins when they meet again, and it ought to be a corking scrap.

abandoned the Muldon idea and will go back to his trade. And here's all the success in the world to him.

WILLING TO GO BACK.
Harry Hackenberg, Deserter, Surrenders Himself.

Knowing that he could not inherit his portion of the fortune that will come to him from relatives in Idaho when he reaches the age of maturity, if he continued to be a fugitive from justice, Harry Hackenberg, a young white man, surrendered himself to the police yesterday and asked them to send him back to the United States army, from which he had deserted. He says that he enlisted some time ago, and that after remaining for a few days became dissatisfied and quit. Since that time he has been roaming about the country, thinking every minute that he would be arrested and taken back. He was in Police Court yesterday and was held until the 18th, to allow the officers time enough to communicate with the proper officials.

Black Diamond, a notorious negro character, went to the grand jury for stabbing Pleasant Woolrich.

Martha Ann Taylor went to jail for six days because she was drunk and disorderly.

The three negro women who were arrested by Constable Angle, of the county, on the charge of stealing coal from the tracks of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, asked for a continuance, that they might be able to prove an alibi.

Delightful Birthday Party.
Little Miss Clothilde Eileen entertained delightfully fourteen of her friends Saturday afternoon at a birthday party from 4 to 6. Among those present were Misses Mary Simpson, Nannie Bailey, Eleanor Kirk, Elbert Taylor, Evelyn Crowder, Margaret Josephine Patterson, Margaret Marion, Helen M. Mason, Alice Bell, Adelaide Pelouze, Isabel Puller, Geoscila Maloney and Willie Bailey. Several refreshments and games were indulged in, after which the guests retired to the dining room, where a delightful lunch was served.

STUDENTS OPPOSE ATHLETIC RULES

The Advisory Board Will Not Accept Them Unless Apply to Their Opponents Too.

THEY ARE TOO STRINGENT

President Alderman Has Assurance That North Carolina Will Follow Suit.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

CHARLOTTEVILLE, VA., January 6.—The pronounced stand for pure athletics taken by the faculty of the University of Virginia meets with the general approval of the alumni and friends of that institution. Similar rules will no doubt be adopted by colleges all over the South.

The student body at Virginia is taking the matter calmly as yet, but there are evidences of bitter opposition. Possibly they have not yet had time to consider the rules more carefully. The general sentiment at present, however, seems to be that Virginia will play no other institution that does not adopt similar resolutions. They feel that it will be a great injustice to the teams to require them to adhere to these excessively stringent laws, while their opponents are free to play whom they choose.

Captain Hammond Johnson and Manager Robertson, of the foot-ball team, have declared firmly that they will resign their positions in case some step is not taken to protect the men. They assert that they are not willing to have anything to do with a team that is tied hand and foot and showed forward to contest with unrestricted teams.

The advisory board of the General Athletic Association has taken an somewhat similar position. They refuse to have anything to do with the resolutions, unless the clause is inserted requiring all opposing teams to have similar regulations. With this exception the board is heartily in favor of the new rules. Although they are somewhat more stringent than they had anticipated, they are ready to accept them in case protection is afforded the players.

A number of students have consulted with faculty members, stating clearly their position in the matter. President Alderman is reported to have made the positive assertion that he had been assured by President Venable, of the University of North Carolina, that similar regulations would be adopted at once in the Tar-Heel institution. The faculty has been in communication with other southern colleges and it is practically certain that they will all follow the lead of Virginia and declare in no uncertain terms for absolute purity in athletics.

The student body realizes that if their opponents are not protected, they are left unprotected. A defeat can be expected. North Carolina will have next season a stronger team than the one which won the first Thanksgiving Day contest in Norfolk.

Almost the entire team will return. Unless some of these men are declared ineligible, Virginia cannot hope for victory against the Tar-Heels.

Captain Johnson, of the Virginia eleven, stated today that Virginia could not hope to have as good team next year as this year. Many players were lost by graduation, and the new rules preclude the use of every possible strong man material. He was not willing to let his men to certain defeat, when the conditions were so unfair.

The regulations that have been drawn up at Virginia are possibly the most stringent of the kind ever adopted. They remove every possibility of professionalism, and place such restrictions on the teams that many bona fide students will be cut out. The clause which forbids the use of professional coaches is almost unique, and is in vogue in but one or two institutions in the country. The committee probably realized that there was a decided sentiment throughout the country in favor of removing the professional coach, and they thought it better to take the lead than to lag behind, and follow suit later on.
